

the Society was given the land necessary to establish a school, and the doors to the first school opened on Jefferson Avenue, between St. Antoine and Beaubien Streets, in 1861.

In its first 20 years, this institution—dedicated to the pursuit of “faith seeking understanding” and the service of others—underwent a tenfold increase in enrollment. Detroit’s economic growth paralleled the school’s increasing enrollment, and the school found itself surrounded by factories and warehouses. The changing demographic led the school to sell its building, in 1918, to the Packard Motor Co. The school relocated to the corner of Lawrence and Woodrow Wilson Avenues. Further development and the establishment of the Lodge Freeway separated this new facility from the neighborhoods it served and enrollment dropped. This led the school to seek yet another new campus.

The third incarnation of the Academy of the Sacred Heart led it to its present location in Bloomfield Hills, MI. Today, the Academy continues to build on its tradition of faith and dedication to service. Attendance has blossomed at the school with nearly 500 students, of many faiths and cultural backgrounds, from all across the Detroit area. In addition to receiving quality academic instruction, students at the Academy learn by performing community service through various organizations in Detroit.

The entire Academy of the Sacred Heart community—the Society of the Sacred Heart, the faculty, alumni and current students—can take pride in the school’s long and honorable service to the people of Michigan. I hope my Senate colleagues will join me in saluting the Academy of the Sacred Heart for a century and a half of achievement and in wishing them well on the next century and a half of continued success.●
